

TARA FAIRCLOTH
DIRECTOR

Stage director Tara Faircloth's work has been seen in opera houses around the nation. Critics hailed her recent directorial debut at Lyric Opera of Chicago: a "wickedly funny, elegantly sung, cleverly directed production of Rossini's The Barber of Seville." In recent seasons, she created new productions of The Little Prince (Utah Opera), Ariadne auf Naxos (Wolf Trap Opera), Il re pastore (Merola Opera), Agrippina (Ars Lyrica Houston), and L'incoronazione di Poppea (Boston Baroque).

The 2021-2022 season finds Ms. Faircloth working on several new productions, including Emmeline with Tulsa Opera, La Traviata at Opera Santa Barbara and The Merry Wives of Windsor with The Juilliard School, as well as a program with Ars Lyrica Houston entitled "Eternity and the Underworld" which pairs Jonathan Dove's The Other Euridice and Bach's Ich habe genug. In addition, she revisits old favorite The Barber of Seville in a debut at The Dallas Opera.

Faircloth has a thriving career in regional houses such as Utah Opera, Wolf Trap Opera, Arizona Opera, Tulsa Opera and Atlanta Opera (Il barbiere di Siviglia, Rigoletto, Die Zauberflöte, Hänsel & Gretel, etc.). The baroque repertoire is of special interest to Ms. Faircloth, who made her directorial debut with Ars Lyrica Houston's production of Cain: Il primo omicidio in 2003 and has since designed and directed a number of shows for the company including Charpentier's Actéon and La descente d'Orphée aux enfers. She created productions of Dido & Aeneas for Ars Lyrica at the Festival di Musica Barroca in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico, and for Mercury Baroque in collaboration with the Dominic Walsh Dance Theater.

Recent seasons for Ms. Faircloth have included new productions of Il re pastore with Merola Opera, Agrippina with Ars Lyrica Houston, The Little Prince with Utah Opera, The Coronation of Poppea with Boston Baroque, Eugene Onegin with Arizona Opera, and Britten's A Midsummer Night's Dream with Boston University. Additionally, she has directed new productions of Madama Butterfly with Wolf Trap Opera, L'enfant et les sortilèges with Utah Symphony & Opera, Don Giovanni with Arizona Opera, and a reconfiguration of her 2014 Wolf Trap Carmen for Arizona Opera.

Ms. Faircloth has worked extensively on the directing staff of such companies as Lyric Opera of Chicago, Houston Grand Opera, Central City Opera, and Dallas Opera, and as such, has worked on some of the most complicated operas in the repertoire, assisting international directors and preparing cover casts of some of the best performers in our industry. Passionate about dramatic training for young singers, she is the Drama Instructor for the Houston Grand Opera Studio and HGO's Young Artists' Vocal Academy and has served as a guest coach at Wolf Trap Opera Studio, Des Moines Metro Opera, University of Michigan, and Rice University. She splits her time between Austin and Houston, Texas, where she enjoys restoring her 1935 Craftsman Bungalow.

TARA FAIRCLOTH
DIRECTOR
CRITICAL ACCLAIM

Rigoletto – Austin Opera

"stage director Tara Faircloth highlighted the concrete and specific psychologies of the characters rather than the general and pictorial elements in a story about a venal Duke of Mantua pitted against Rigoletto, his cruel and vengeful jester, and Gilda, Rigoletto's innocent daughter and one of the Duke's prime sexual targets."
-Austin 360

"From the moment the curtain rose I was fully entranced by every aspect of the production. Stage Director Tara Faircloth presents an extravagant work of art in every aspect, her playfulness shows in small moments that bring chuckles from the audience."
-BroadwayWorld.com

Il barbiere di Siviglia – Lyric Opera of Chicago (remount)

Lyric Opera review: A wickedly funny 'Barber of Seville' begins season

"Lyric Opera of Chicago launched its 65th season on Saturday night with a laugh. Quite a few of them, actually, thanks to a wickedly funny, elegantly sung, cleverly directed production of Rossini's "The Barber of Seville" . . . You don't often hear opera audiences laughing out loud – constantly and with abandon – as they did during this evening. But Rob Ashford's original direction, revived from the 2013-14 season by Tara Faircloth in her Lyric directorial debut, went for guffaws and got them, in abundance."
-Chicago Tribune

Lyric Opera opens season with a bright and delightful "Barber of Seville"

"Faircloth's direction made a vast improvement over the premiere and was professional, resourceful and often clever, seemingly allowing the trio of leads to work out much of their own bits of business, which paid off superbly."
-Chicago Classical Review

"The Barber of Seville" Highly Recommended *****

"The audience laughed nonstop for an hour in the second half of The Barber of Seville, as ninety minutes of meticulous set-up broke into madcap comedy. . . A remount directed by Tara Faircloth of the Rob Ashford production that played here five years, ago, Barber has lost none of its vitality, and is an ideal display of the physical comedy and vocal talents of its cast. . . As far as staging, Ashford and Faircloth have a knack for finding just plausible enough business to create a laugh-a-minute farce."
-Around the Town Chicago

Ariadne auf Naxos – Wolf Trap Opera

"Director Tara Faircloth used the supporting cast to advantage in a production that was at once fairly conventional — set around the time the opera was written, in the early 20th century — and quietly inventive, particularly in its use of the backstage area in Act II, so you could see what was happening on the fictive stage and what was going on behind the scenes."
-Washington Post

"The production directed by Tara Faircloth made clever use of the proscenium area, separated from the orchestra in both acts by a diagonal wall. . . Faircloth's direction, especially the use of small "offstage" areas in the wings in the second act, brilliantly walked the line required by the opera, with slapstick parody that did not get in the way of the exalted moments in the score."
-Washington Classical Review

"Director Tara Faircloth did an excellent job in presenting the story, especially in choreographing the moves of a large number of players on a small stage and bringing each character to life."
-Opera Gene

Le nozze di Figaro – Arizona Opera

"Stage Director Tara Faircloth chose to expand upon the amusing situations in Lorenzo da Ponte's libretto, so that cast members were often running around the stage and pushing each other to the floor while singing the score's florid music. They never missed a beat or a grace note, either. In fact, they occasionally decorated their arias. Faircloth drove playwright Pierre-Augustin Caron de Beaumarchais's sharpest point home because the servants were always smarter and had higher morals than their noble masters."
-Opera Wire

The Little Prince – Utah Opera

"This is one of the most enjoyable productions I have seen at Utah Opera. Directed by Tara Faircloth, her work with the singers is inspired and her direction is engaging."
-Utah Theatre Bloggers Association

"...Their pure, harmonious, bell-like voices along with how Director Tara Faircloth blocks them throughout the show creates a movement that crescendoed in all the right places for me...Not only are the music, costumes, set, and performances incredible, but the story itself transcends all ages and is most memorable. Come ready for a visual and auditory adventure that explores the soul and opens the heart to understanding what's important."
-Front Row Reviewers Utah

Agrippina – Ars Lyrica Houston

"Stage director Tara Faircloth emphasized comedy, as in Claudio's preening demeanor on his first entrance; Pallante and Narciso's fawning over Agrippina; and the fluttering of the servant Lesbo, played by Eduardo Tercero. But for Handel's serious moments—as in Ottone's big aria,—Faircloth quieted everything down, and the poignant results helped Handel's extraordinary music tell its story."
-Texas Classical Review

"Directed by Tara Faircloth, ably abetted by costumer Macy Lyne and lighting designer Frank Vela (there's no set designer listed in the program), the show is chic and full of pop and awe. Everything glistens: the gowns, the men's spats, the cushions, Nero's tie, the henchmen's vests, the multiple chandeliers. Like one of those big white sets out of a Fred and Ginger RKO fantasy, Agrippina is sleek and clean, an Art Deco dream of silver lamé and sequins. It's lovely to look at."
-Houston Press

Il re pastore – Merola Opera

"Tara Faircloth's staging of K. 208 dispensed with almost all of the "seria" elements (except for honoring the da capo structure of the arias), establishing the element of farce from the very opening gestures and maintaining the comic rhetoric with impeccable timing and prodigious diversity in every element of the plot structure. . . Faircloth's staging of this topsy-turvy unfolding of events was so convincing that it is hard to imagine this opera being given a more serious interpretation." -The Rehearsal Studio

Pagliacci/Gianni Schicchi – Utah Opera

"Under the sure hands of stage director Tara Faircloth and conductor Timothy Myers, these one-act operas spanned a broad emotional range with tight drama, good pacing and imaginative charm"
-Opera News

Tosca – Arizona Opera

"a dramatic production directed by Tara Faircloth. . . Director Faircloth made sure we understood the fine points of her story"
-Opera Today

Carmen – Utah Opera

"Georges Bizet's Carmen opened Utah Opera's new season on October 8, featuring a uniformly young and attractive cast under the direction of Tara Faircloth. Faircloth deftly fleshed out characters' motivation, driving momentum and credibility as the story careened to its fated conclusion. She also injected a modicum of humor that, despite one bit of slapstick in the first act that had soldiers swooning during the "Habanera," briefly relieved mounting tension. The opera, sung in French with English titles, incorporated original spoken dialogue, delivered beautifully by cast members. . ."
-Opera News

"Utah Opera opened its five-performance run of "Carmen" Saturday night with a stirring performance in a sold-out Capitol Theatre. . . As directed by Tara Faircloth, Tucker's portrayal refutes the old trope that "good" equals "boring"; her Micaëla won over Saturday's audience with her polite but firm assertion of her boundaries in the first act and her deft handling of Don José in the third."
-Salt Lake Tribune

Le nozze di Figaro – Utah Opera

"With a compelling, organic blend of musical, dramatic and visual elements, Utah Opera's The Marriage of Figaro was an unqualified success . . . the updated concept allowed more accessible examination of Figaro's thematic ideas, including social class entitlement, fidelity and forgiveness, but with enough distance to avoid an air of contemporary preachiness. This balance was expertly achieved by set director Tara Faircloth, whose light touch, dedication to detail and motivation empowered each singer to fully realize their character. Taking a cue from Mozart's brilliant ability to seamlessly expand from duet to septet and beyond, Faircloth involved each cast member in a meaningful way and used this as a spring-board, validating greater ensemble awareness and contribution."
-Opera News

"Stage director Tara Faircloth delivered just the right amount of physical comedy while making sure the characters' humanity always rang true. Under her direction, every movement and gesture, even in the choreographed moments, propelled the story naturally."
-Salt Lake Tribune

A Midsummer Night's Dream – Boston University

"It is impossible to consider details of production without discussing the ingenious overall design by Tara Faircloth. Her aesthetic featured an organized, and controlled chaos, with highly stylized movement from all characters. The lovers, caught in some time between 1920-1960, use a specified movement vocabulary to execute all actions from wandering through the woods to a four-person brawl, while the faeries engaged in court dance; the rustics' Bergamasque dance was anything but courtly. Though no single moment lost control of these stipulations, the show gave an impression of losing the reins at any moment—which was very exciting to watch."
-Boston Musical Intelligencer

Carmen – Arizona Opera

"Arizona Opera's production of Carmen last evening was a superb conglomeration of sexy, violence and art. . . This production of Carmen, directed by Tara Faircloth, featured a number of interesting staging elements. . . When you go to the opera you expect many things: the stage to feel far removed from reality, the production to be both fantastic and mystical, and to be treated to a spectacle. This was not the experience of going to Carmen, and that was the best part of this interpretation. The characters felt so real and relatable that the audience had no choice but to laugh, cry and empathize with them. The production elements were both modern and rustic, making it easy for the audience to connect on a visceral plane."
-The Daily Wildcat

La bohème – Tulsa Opera

"What invigorates this production is director Tara Faircloth's fine attention to dramatic and comic detail and a cast able to transform these characters into people. . . Faircloth's pacing of the action kept it as naturalistic as an opera can be and did much to play up the comedy in the piece — I have never heard an audience laugh so much at "La Boheme."
-Tulsa World

Le nozze di Figaro – Atlanta Opera

"On April 4 the Atlanta Opera offered an exceedingly fast-paced rendition of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's Le Nozze di Figaro at the Cobb Energy Performing Arts Centre. Stage director Tara Faircloth made her AO debut this night with distinction, creating an unstoppable momentum of manipulation and misunderstandings. . . As Mozart and Beaumarchais intended to make a political statement about social class within Le Nozze di Figaro, likewise this production was so fresh that it had the ability to bridge yet another gap, entertaining the amateur and the opera aficionado alike."
-Opera News

Eugene Onegin – Arizona Opera

"Director Tara Faircloth's production spun the narrative extremely cogently, with keen eyes towards detailing the characters in terms of movement, props, and — an increasing rarity in the surtitle era — responsiveness to sung text. . . Zucker, with Spencer Smith, took on Act III's potentially dazzling Polonaise and Écossaise as a virtuoso duo team, whose interaction sometimes reflected the Tatiana/Onegin tensions: an interesting, professional solution to budget restraints, and thus representative of Faircloth's achievement overall. Her fine production merits attention from other regional companies."
- Opera News

Fidelio – Madison Opera

"Faircloth creates dynamic scenes throughout the opera, from Marzelline and Jaquino ducking behind laundry lines to the prisoners' thrill at their first glimpse of warm sunshine....Faircloth's staging matches the look of the production, too, with castle-and-gate sets from Michigan Opera and artful lighting design..."
-Madison.com

"The most important debut was that of director Tara Faircloth; once again Smith and DeMain consistently tap worthy directors who work through the heart of a work. With sets from Michigan Opera Theater (dominated by two receding stone arches on either side of the stage) and costumes from Utah Opera, Faircloth deftly manages to move the principals about effectively. The famous "Prisoners Chorus" at the end of Act I, in which the men see the light of day for the first time in what seems like an eternity, revealed Faircloth's willingness to let the music unfold the action."
-Madison Magazine

Carmen – Wolf Trap Opera

"Director Tara Faircloth kept things moving along briskly, adding bursts of physical activity, especially drinks tossed into faces, for punctuation."
- Opera News

HMS Pinafore – Arizona Opera

Fun Loving H.M.S. Pinafore Opens Arizona Opera

"Arizona Opera gave its Phoenix audience a thoroughly joyous rendition of this lighthearted work . . . Director Tara Faircloth devised various types of comic antics for the cast but they never interfered with the singing." - Opera Today

L'elisir d'amore – Prelude to Performance, The Martina Arroyo Foundation

" . . . Tara Faircloth's buoyant direction allowed each performer to play to his or her strengths, and Faircloth drew comedy from characterization." - Opera News

The Rake's Progress – Wolf Trap Opera

"Wolf Trap...hit one of its highest peaks of the last decade with its bracing production of The Rake's Progress...incisive, tightly meshed direction. With little details... and terrifically buoyant choreography, Tara Faircloth gave the production a kick at every turn." - Opera News

"Tara Faircloth directed a simple and elegant production"

- The Washington Post

"Easily ranks among the most satisfying Wolf Trap Opera Company productions, musically and theatrically, of the past decade....imaginative and absorbing touches throughout."

- The Baltimore Sun

Barber of Seville – Tulsa Opera

"Lively, well-rehearsed production by Tara Faircloth."

- The New Yorker

"The show was a delight from start to finish."

- Tulsa World

Barber of Seville – Utah Opera

"The entire opera surged with...exciting drive, showcasing a cast with exceptional voices and spot-on comedic timing. Stage director Tara Faircloth contributed to the evening's momentum by leaving no detail unaddressed." - Opera News

"Tara Faircloth directs a masterful tapestry of storytelling, music and visual display, leaving the audience craning their necks for where to look next."

- Deseret News

"The staging was creative and clever, and my amazement at the musical quality of the performance was interrupted only by my joining in the roaring laughter of the audience."

- Reichel Recommends

Il Trovatore – Opera Colorado

"An imaginative, absorbing affair."

- Denver Post

Die Zauberflöte – Tulsa Opera

"The clarity of what goes on in this production -- the way Mozart's music is played and sung, the manner in which director Tara Faircloth has staged the action, how the unamplified dialogue is easily heard -- is such that you almost have to remind yourself to look up at the captions. ... Faircloth, in her company debut as director, has made sure to keep the simplicity of the story paramount, and not let it get lost amid the stagecraft and special effects."
